METHODOLOGY

On behalf of Families Against Mandatory Minimums (FAMM), Robert Blizzard of Public Opinion Strategies completed a national survey of 1000 registered voters via online. The survey was conducted October 6-10, 2022 and has a credibility interval of ± 3.53%.
The Criminal Justice System
There continues to be a strong sentiment the nation’s criminal justice system needs “significant improvements.”

And, generally speaking, do you strongly support, somewhat support, somewhat oppose, or strongly oppose reforming the nation’s criminal justice system?
Prisons & Early Release
Americans continue to believe there are “too many people in the country’s prisons.”

In your opinion, do you think there are...

Too many people in the country’s prisons
Not enough people in the country’s prisons

...or...

Is the number of people in prison about right?

N=500 Registered voters
A strong majority of voters still say it is important to reduce the number of people in prison.

In your opinion, how important is it to reduce the number of people who are in the country’s prisons?

N=500 Registered voters
By more than two-to-one, voters believe people should be considered for early release if they are unlikely to commit future crimes.

Which ONE of the following statements comes closer to your own opinion?

People should stay in prison and serve their full sentences, even if they reach a point at which they are unlikely to commit future crimes

...or...

People in prison should be allowed to be considered for an early release from their sentence if they reach a point at which they are unlikely to commit future crimes

Compassionate Release Programs
After voters hear some background about compassionate release programs...

As you may know, compassionate release programs, sometimes known as medical, elderly, or geriatric parole or release, are programs that provide very sick or elderly people with eligibility to get out of prison early if they no longer pose a risk to public safety or are unlikely to commit future crimes.

Generally speaking, do you strongly support, somewhat support, somewhat oppose, or strongly oppose compassionate release programs?
By a 70%-25% margin, Americans support compassionate release programs.

Voters across age and race support compassionate release.

Generally speaking, do you strongly support, somewhat support, somewhat oppose, or strongly oppose compassionate release programs?
There’s overwhelming agreement that a victim’s opinion about release should be considered, but not the sole factor.

The victim's opinion about compassionate release should be considered, but it should not be the sole factor in the release decision.
