

18-3430

United States Court of Appeals
FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT

In Re: UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Petitioner.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Petitioner,

v.

YEHUDI MANZANO,

Respondent.

PETITION FOR WRIT OF MANDAMUS OR WRIT OF PROHIBITION TO
THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF CONNECTICUT

BRIEF OF THE CATO INSTITUTE, FAMM FOUNDATION, AND NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CRIMINAL DEFENSE LAWYERS AS AMICI CURIAE IN SUPPORT OF RESPONDENT

Mary Price
FAMM FOUNDATION
1100 H Street, N.W.
Suite 1000
Washington, D.C. 20005
(202) 822-6700
mprice@famm.org

Clark M. Neily III
Jay R. Schweikert
Counsel of Record
CATO INSTITUTE
1000 Mass. Ave., N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
(202) 216-1461
jschweikert@cato.org

Peter Goldberger
50 Rittenhouse Place
Ardmore, PA 19003
peter.goldberger@verizon.net

Joel B. Rudin
Vice Chair, Amicus Curiae
Committee
NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF
CRIMINAL DEFENSE LAWYERS
152 West 57th Street, 8th Floor
New York, NY 10019
(212) 752-7600

RULE 26.1 CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

The Cato Institute, FAMM Foundation, and National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers are nonprofit entities operating under § 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. Amici are not subsidiaries or affiliates of any publicly owned corporations, and they do not issue shares of stock. No publicly held corporation has a direct financial interest in the outcome of this litigation due to amici's participation.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

RULE 26.1 CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT..... i
INTEREST OF AMICI CURIAE 1
SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT 2
ARGUMENT 4
I. THE INDEPENDENCE OF CITIZEN JURIES IS A WELL-ESTABLISHED AND CRUCIAL FEATURE OF OUR LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY..... 4
II. THE DISTRICT COURT’S OPENNESS TO PERMITTING EVIDENCE AND ARGUMENT AS TO THE CONSEQUENCES OF A CONVICTION IS A REASONABLE EXERCISE OF THE COURT’S DISCRETION, NOT SUBJECT TO CONTROL BY MANDAMUS. 8
 A. The District Court’s provisional decisions thoughtfully harmonize different threads of modern case law, respecting the jury’s traditional authority to issue conscientious acquittals while still operating within the strictures of precedent. 8
 B. Permitting a jury to hear evidence about the consequences of conviction is especially reasonable in a case with a severe and surprising mandatory minimum. 12
III. PROTECTING JURY INDEPENDENCE IS ALL THE MORE IMPORTANT GIVEN THE VANISHINGLY SMALL ROLE THAT JURY TRIALS PLAY IN OUR CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM..... 15
CONCLUSION..... 17
CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE..... 18
CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE 19

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

	Page(s)
Cases
Blakely v. Washington , 542 U.S. 296 (2004).....	7
Bushell’s Case , 124 Eng. Rep. 1006 (C.P. 1670).....	4
Cheney v. U.S. Dist. Court for Dist. of Columbia , 542 U.S. 367 (2004).....	8
Duncan v. Louisiana , 391 U.S. 145 (1968).....	4, 7
Gregg v. Georgia , 428 U.S. 153 (1976).....	9
Hong Mai v. Doe , 406 F.3d 155 (2d Cir. 2005).....	3, 12
Horning v. District of Columbia , 254 U.S. 135 (1920).....	2
In re FCC , 217 F.3d 125 (2d Cir. 2000).....	12
Jones v. United States , 526 U.S. 227 (1999).....	4, 15
Lafler v. Cooper , 566 U.S. 156 (2012).....	15
Mulligan Law Firm v. Zyprexa MDL Plaintiffs’ Steering Comm. II , 594 F.3d 113 (2d Cir. 2009).....	8
Powers v. Ohio , 499 U.S. 400 (1991).....	7
Sparf v. United States , 156 U.S. 51 (1895).....	8
Thompson v. Utah , 170 U.S. 343 (1898).....	6
United States v. Alston , 112 F.3d 32 (1st Cir. 1994).....	10, 11
United States v. González-Pérez , 778 F.3d 3 (1st Cir. 2015).....	10
United States v. Kleinman , 880 F.3d 1020 (9th Cir. 2018).....	9
United States v. Lynch , 903 F.3d 1061 (9th Cir. 2018).....	11
United States v. Moylan , 417 F.2d 1002 (4th Cir. 1969).....	10
United States v. Mulder , 273 F.3d 91 (2d Cir. 2001).....	14
United States v. Muse , 83 F.3d 672 (4th Cir. 1996).....	10
United States v. Polizzi , 549 F. Supp. 2d 308 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).....	11
United States v. Polouizzi , 564 F.3d 142 (2d Cir. 2009).....	passim
United States v. Shannon , 512 U.S. 573 (1994).....	12
United States v. Simpson , 460 F.2d 515 (9th Cir. 1972).....	9
United States v. Thomas , 116 F.3d 606 (2d Cir. 1997).....	8

United States v. Trujillo , 714 F.2d 102 (11th Cir. 1983).....	10
Statutes
18 U.S.C. § 2251(a)	14
18 U.S.C. § 2252A(a)(1).....	14
Other Authorities
2 J. STORY, COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES § 1779	6
4 WILLIAM M. BLACKSTONE, COMMENTARIES ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND (1769)...	6
AKHIL REED AMAR, THE BILL OF RIGHTS: CREATION AND RECONSTRUCTION (1998)	7
Albert W. Alschuler & Andrew G. Deiss, A Brief History of the Criminal Jury in the United States , 61 U. CHI. L. REV. 867 (1994).....	5
ALEXIS DE TOCQUEVILLE, DEMOCRACY IN AMERICA (Phillips Bradley ed. 1945)....	7
CLAY CONRAD, JURY NULLIFICATION: THE EVOLUTION OF A DOCTRINE (2d ed 2014).....	4, 5, 6
Jed S. Rakoff, Why Innocent People Plead Guilty , N.Y. REV. OF BOOKS, Nov. 20, 2014.....	15
JEFFREY ABRAMSON, WE, THE JURY: THE JURY SYSTEM AND THE IDEAL OF DEMOCRACY (1994)	6
LYSANDER SPOONER, AN ESSAY ON THE TRIAL BY JURY (1852).....	4
NAT’L ASS’N OF CRIM. DEF. LAWYERS, THE TRIAL PENALTY: THE SIXTH AMENDMENT RIGHT TO TRIAL ON THE VERGE OF EXTINCTION AND HOW TO SAVE IT (2018).....	16
THE FEDERALIST NO. 83	7
THOMAS ANDREW GREEN, VERDICT ACCORDING TO CONSCIENCE: PERSPECTIVES ON THE ENGLISH CRIMINAL TRIAL JURY, 1200–1800 (1985).....	5

INTEREST OF *AMICI CURIAE*¹

The Cato Institute is a nonpartisan public policy research foundation founded in 1977 and dedicated to advancing the principles of individual liberty, free markets, and limited government.

FAMM is a nonpartisan, national advocacy organization promoting fair and effective criminal justice reforms. Founded in 1991 as Families Against Mandatory Minimums, FAMM raises the voices of individuals directly affected by counterproductive sentencing and prison policies. FAMM is keenly interested in the resolution of this petition because of the corrosive effect of mandatory minimum sentencing.

The National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers (“NACDL”) is a nonprofit voluntary professional bar association founded in 1958 that, together with its affiliates, has more than 40,000 members. It works on behalf of criminal defense attorneys to ensure justice and due process for those accused of crimes.

¹ Fed. R. App. P. 29 Statement: No counsel for either party authored this brief in whole or in part. No person or entity other than amici and their members made a monetary contribution to its preparation or submission. Pursuant to Rule 29(a)(2), all parties have consented to the filing of this brief.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

Throughout the entire Anglo-American legal tradition, the independence of citizen jurors has been understood to be an indispensable structural check on executive and legislative power. This independence has traditionally implied that jurors would both understand the consequences of a conviction and possess the power of conscientious acquittal, or “jury nullification”—that is, the inherent prerogative to decline to convict a defendant, even if factual guilt is shown beyond a reasonable doubt, when convicting would work a manifest injustice.²

Notwithstanding the storied history of jury independence, there is tension in modern case law on the subject. Courts have generally held that defendants do not have a right to argue directly for conscientious acquittal, nor to insist that juries be made aware of potential sentences in all cases, yet courts continue to protect the power of juries to acquit “in the teeth of both law and facts.” Horning v. District of Columbia, 254 U.S. 135, 138 (1920). Most critically, neither this Court nor the Supreme Court has ever held that it is inherently improper for a judge to permit the introduction of evidence as to the consequences of a conviction or that a judge must prohibit any argument touching on the potential for nullification. On the contrary, as this Court indicated in United States v. Polouizzi, 564 F.3d 142, 161–63 (2d Cir. 2009), such matters are within the district court’s discretion.

² Amici suggest that “jury nullification” is a misleading term, as the phrase seems to beg the question as to whether such acquittals are lawful exercises of the jury’s discretion. “Conscientious acquittal” would be a more apt description, and amici will use that phrase interchangeably in this brief.

In this case, the District Court’s openness to permitting evidence as to a 15-year mandatory minimum and its tentative willingness to permit argument concerning nullification do not warrant the extraordinary remedy of a writ of mandamus. The judge’s comments at the pre-trial conference reflect only his initial judgment that, in light of the extreme and unusual nature of this particular case (in which the government has charged a grossly disproportionate 15-year mandatory minimum), it may be appropriate for the jury to hear evidence and argument as to the consequences of a conviction. No Second Circuit case holds that this approach, which is still contingent on how the trial itself develops, exceeds a district court’s discretion, so mandamus will not lie. Hong Mai v. Doe, 406 F.3d 155, 158–59 (2d Cir. 2005).

Moreover, it is especially important to protect the court’s discretion in this regard, in light of the near-disappearance of the criminal jury trial. Today, jury trials have been all but replaced by plea bargaining as the baseline for criminal adjudication, and severe mandatory minimums, like the one at issue here, are a major driver of this trend. Preserving the possibility that juries may, in appropriate cases, be informed about the consequences of conviction is a small but vital safeguard against the wholesale erosion of the jury trial itself.

ARGUMENT

I. THE INDEPENDENCE OF CITIZEN JURIES IS A WELL-ESTABLISHED AND CRUCIAL FEATURE OF OUR LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY.

The right to a jury trial developed as a “check or control” on executive power—an essential “barrier” between “the liberties of the people and the prerogative of the crown.” Duncan v. Louisiana, 391 U.S. 145, 151, 156 (1968) (trial by jury is an “inestimable safeguard against the corrupt or overzealous prosecutor and against the compliant, biased, or eccentric judge”); see also Jones v. United States, 526 U.S. 227, 246 (1999) (quoting Blackstone’s characterization of “trial by jury as ‘the grand bulwark’ of English liberties”).

Scholars have long debated the origin of so-called “jury nullification,” but something resembling our notion of an independent jury refusing to enforce unjust laws pre-dates the signing of Magna Carta. See CLAY CONRAD, JURY NULLIFICATION: THE EVOLUTION OF A DOCTRINE 13 (2d ed. 2014); see also LYSANDER SPOONER, AN ESSAY ON THE TRIAL BY JURY 51–85 (1852) (discussing the practice both before and after Magna Carta). In other words, jury independence is as ancient and storied as the Anglo-Saxon legal tradition itself.

A significant pre-colonial influence on the Framers was Bushell’s Case, 124 Eng. Rep. 1006 (C.P. 1670). Bushell was a member of an English jury that refused to convict William Penn for violating the Conventicle Act, which prohibited religious assemblies of more than five people outside the auspices of the Church of England. See THOMAS ANDREW GREEN, VERDICT ACCORDING TO CONSCIENCE: PERSPECTIVES ON THE ENGLISH CRIMINAL TRIAL JURY, 1200–1800, at 236–49 (1985). Due to Penn’s factual guilt, the trial judge essentially ordered the jury to return a guilty verdict, and imprisoned the jurors for contempt when they refused. However, the Court of Common Pleas granted a writ of habeas corpus, cementing the authority of a jury to acquit against the wishes of the Crown. Id.

This understanding of the jury trial was likewise firmly established in the American colonies. In the years preceding the American Revolution, “[e]arly American jurors had frequently refused to enforce the acts of Parliament in order to protect the autonomy of the colonies.” CONRAD, supra, at 4. One notable case involved John Peter Zenger, who was charged with seditious libel for printing newspapers critical of the royal governor of New York. Albert W. Alschuler & Andrew G. Deiss, A Brief History of the Criminal Jury in the United States, 61 U. CHI. L. REV. 867, 871–72 (1994). The jury refused to convict notwithstanding Zenger’s factual culpability, thus establishing an early landmark for freedom of the press and jury independence. Id. at 873–74. Indeed, “Zenger’s trial was not an aberration; during the pre-Revolutionary period, juries and grand juries all but nullified the law of seditious libel in the colonies.” Id. America’s Founders thus “inherited a well-evolved view of the role of the jury, and both adopted it and adapted it for use in the new Nation.” CONRAD, supra, at 4.

A necessary corollary of Colonial juries’ authority to issue conscientious acquittals was their awareness of the consequences of a conviction. In an era with a far simpler criminal code, detailed instructions from the judge were often unnecessary to ensure that the jury was properly informed. See, e.g., JEFFREY ABRAMSON, WE, THE JURY: THE JURY SYSTEM AND THE IDEAL OF DEMOCRACY 22–29, 32, 34–35 (1994) (“[J]urors did not even need to rely on a judge’s instructions to know the common law of the land”). Juries were thus able to tailor their verdicts to prevent excessive punishment. See, e.g., 4 WILLIAM M. BLACKSTONE, COMMENTARIES ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND *342–44 (1769) (juries often found value of stolen goods to be less than twelvecence in order to avoid mandatory death penalty for theft of more valuable goods).

The community’s central role in the administration of criminal justice has therefore been evident since our country’s founding. “Those who emigrated to this country from England brought with them this great privilege ‘as their birthright and inheritance, as a part of that admirable common law which had fenced around and interposed barriers on every side against the approaches of arbitrary power.’” Thompson v. Utah, 170 U.S. 343, 349–350 (1898) (quoting 2 J. STORY, COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES § 1779). Alexander Hamilton observed that “friends and adversaries of the plan of the [constitutional] convention, if they agree[d] in nothing else, concur[red] at least in the value they set upon the trial by jury; or if there [was] any difference between them it consist[ed] in this: the former regard[ed] it as a valuable safeguard to liberty; the latter represent[ed] it as the very palladium of free government.” THE FEDERALIST NO. 83. This “insistence upon community participation in the determination of guilt or innocence” directly addressed the Founders’ “[f]ear of unchecked power.” Duncan, 391 U.S. at 156.

Ultimately, the jury is expected to act as the conscience of the community. “Just as suffrage ensures the people’s ultimate control in the legislative and executive branches,” the “jury trial is meant to ensure [the people’s] control in the judiciary,” and constitutes a “fundamental reservation of power in our constitutional structure.” Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 306 (2004). By providing an “opportunity for ordinary citizens to participate in the administration of justice,” the jury trial “preserves the democratic element of the law,” Powers v. Ohio, 499 U.S. 400, 406–07 (1991), and “places the real direction of society in the hands of the governed,” AKHIL REED AMAR, THE BILL OF RIGHTS: CREATION AND RECONSTRUCTION 88 (1998) (quoting ALEXIS DE TOCQUEVILLE, DEMOCRACY IN AMERICA 293–94 (Phillips Bradley ed. 1945)).

II. THE DISTRICT COURT’S OPENNESS TO PERMITTING EVIDENCE AND ARGUMENT AS TO THE CONSEQUENCES OF A CONVICTION IS A REASONABLE EXERCISE OF THE COURT’S DISCRETION, NOT SUBJECT TO CONTROL BY MANDAMUS.

A writ of mandamus “is a drastic and extraordinary remedy reserved for really extraordinary causes.” Mulligan Law Firm v. Zyprexa MDL Plaintiffs’ Steering Comm. II, 594 F.3d 113, 118 (2d Cir. 2009) (quoting Cheney v. U.S. Dist. Court for Dist. of Columbia, 542 U.S. 367, 380 (2004)). A writ will only issue if a district court has “usurped its power or clearly abused its discretion.” Id. at 119. Judge Underhill’s limited and preliminary rulings fall well short of that extraordinarily high standard.

A. The District Court’s provisional decisions thoughtfully harmonize different threads of modern case law, respecting the jury’s traditional authority to issue conscientious acquittals while still operating within the strictures of precedent.

Notwithstanding the storied history of jury independence in the Anglo-American legal tradition, courts today do not protect a defendant’s Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial in the same manner and to the same degree as in the Founding Era. Relying on Sparf v. United States, 156 U.S. 51 (1895), courts have generally held that defendants do not have a constitutional right to argue or obtain an instruction on nullification. See United States v. Thomas, 116 F.3d 606, 615–16 (2d Cir. 1997). And in Polouizzi, this Court held that defendants may not insist upon an instruction on an applicable mandatory minimum. 564 F.3d at 160–61.

Nevertheless, the jury's prerogative to issue conscientious acquittals still receives meaningful protection, and the power of courts to discourage nullification remains bounded by the Sixth Amendment. As recently as 1976, the Supreme Court clarified that any system in which the "the discretionary act of jury nullification would not be permitted . . . would be totally alien to our notions of criminal justice." Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 199 n.50 (1976). More specifically, while courts may discourage nullification, they must not give coercive anti-nullification instructions that "state or imply that (1) jurors could be punished for jury nullification, or that (2) an acquittal resulting from jury nullification is invalid." United States v. Kleinman, 880 F.3d 1020, 1031 (9th Cir. 2018); see also United States v. Simpson, 460 F.2d 515, 520 (9th Cir. 1972) ("American judges have generally avoided such interference as would divest juries of their power to acquit an accused, even though the evidence of his guilt may be clear.") (citing cases).

Most crucially, whereas courts have held that a defendant has no right to introduce evidence or make argument promoting conscientious acquittal, no binding authority precludes a district court from exercising its discretion to permit such arguments in appropriate circumstances. Although the government's petition relies heavily on Polouizzi, that decision explained that "in some, albeit limited, circumstances it may be appropriate to instruct the jury regarding [the] consequences [of conviction]," 564 F.3d at 161, and it refrained from outright curtailing "the district court’s discretion to inform the jury of the applicable mandatory minimum sentence,” id. 162.

The District Court’s proposed course of action here is more limited even than the scenario left undecided in Polouizzi. Judge Underhill’s letter to this Court explicitly states that he is not planning to issue an instruction as to the sentence, nor is he otherwise planning to encourage nullification in any way. Rather, the judge has explained only that he is open to permitting the possible introduction of evidence disclosing the mandatory minimum, and that “if the evidence were admitted, then argument about that evidence could be made.” Dkt. 11.

Though the government concedes that “this Court has not expressly held that a defendant may not argue for nullification,” it nevertheless argues that “other courts across the country” have held as such. Pet. 27. However, all but one of those cases involved the rejection of the argument that a defendant has a right to argue nullification (or have the jury instructed on it). See United States v. González-Pérez, 778 F.3d 3, 18–19 (1st Cir. 2015) (upholding district court’s decision not to present nullification issue to jury); United States v. Muse, 83 F.3d 672, 677 (4th Cir. 1996) (same); United States v. Trujillo, 714 F.2d 102, 105–06 (11th Cir. 1983) (same); United States v. Moylan, 417 F.2d 1002, 1005–07 (4th Cir. 1969) (same).³ This is an entirely different issue than whether a decision to permit such a defense amounts to the “judicial usurpation of power” or “clear abuse of discretion” that is necessary to justify a writ of mandamus. Cheney, 542 U.S. at 380.

³ United States v. Alston, 112 F.3d 32 (1st Cir. 1994)—the one other case cited by the government for this point—is not a nullification case at all; rather, the First Circuit simply upheld a decision to permit introduction of evidence over a Rule 403

There is reason to doubt, in light of the clear history of jury independence discussed in Part I, whether modern case law adequately protects a defendant’s right to a jury trial. See, e.g., United States v. Lynch, 903 F.3d 1061, 1088 (9th Cir. 2018) (Watford, J., dissenting) (“I have my doubts about whether we were right to endorse [an anti-nullification] instruction, for it affirmatively misstates the power that jurors possess.”); United States v. Polizzi, 549 F. Supp. 2d 308, 424 (E.D.N.Y. 2008), rev’d sub nom. United States v. Polouizzi, 564 F.3d 142 (2d Cir. 2009) (“Consistent modern judicial attempts to water down the Sixth Amendment . . . have not escaped notice by academics and other scholars whose commentary has been generally critical of limitations on Sixth Amendment jury power to dispense mercy.”) (citing sources).

But this doubt, and the tensions present in modern case law, need not be resolved to deny the government’s petition. The District Court’s limited and preliminary ruling, while recognizing the acknowledged and protected power of jurors to consider the consequences of a conviction, does not exceed its discretion objection. The court said in passing that the defendant “cannot ask the jury to nullify the law,” id. at 36, but only as a response to an argument that the evidence was too prejudicial.

under existing case law. At the very least, the government's right to relief is not "clear and indisputable," Hong Mai v. Doe, 406 F.3d 155, 158 (2d Cir. 2005) (quoting In re FCC, 217 F.3d 125, 134 (2d Cir. 2000)), and thus does not warrant the extraordinary remedy of mandamus.

B. Permitting a jury to hear evidence about the consequences of conviction is especially reasonable in a case with a severe and surprising mandatory minimum.

Whether or not juries should generally be made aware of sentencing consequences, that information is especially appropriate in a case like Manzano's, where the defendant faces the risk of an extreme and disproportionate mandatory minimum sentence. To support its position that this evidence may not be permitted, the government relies on United States v. Shannon, 512 U.S. 573 (1994), which held that, as a general matter, defendants do not have a right to introduce such evidence. See Pet. 29–30. Shannon relied in large part on the idea of a "basic division of labor in our legal system between judge and jury," namely that "[t]he jury's function is to find the facts," and that "[t]he judge, by contrast, imposes sentence on the defendant after the jury has arrived at a guilty verdict." Id. (quoting Shannon, 512 U.S. at 579).

But even Shannon recognized the discretion of the court to instruct the jury on sentencing consequences to correct the jury's misunderstanding based on a party's misstatement. See 512 U.S. at 587. And critically, the Shannon "division of labor" is illusory where severe mandatory minimums dictate the sentence, thus removing the judge's discretion and potentially misleading a jury to the defendant's detriment. A jury told, in essence, that sentencing is the sole province of the judge will likely infer, erroneously, that the judge possesses actual sentencing discretion to fit the punishment to the offense. A jury that believes it is considering the equivalent of statutory rape (which in many jurisdictions is a strict liability offense punished as a misdemeanor) might well apply the reasonable-doubt standard more laxly than in a more severe case, even though the definition in each instance is the same.

Here, the jury would be more likely to convict if it believes Mr. Manzano would receive a sentence tailored to his actual conduct than if it understood that, under the law, the offense will be treated for sentencing purposes like murder or forcible rape. In Polouizzi, this Court expressly held that neither Shannon nor Second Circuit precedent "lead inexorably to the conclusion that a court may never instruct the jury on the consequences of its verdict." 564 F.3d at 161–62. Avoiding the sort of mistake or confusion that arises when jurors wrongly believe a judge has sentencing discretion is a reasonable basis for permitting evidence about a severe mandatory minimum in an unusual case like this.

Moreover, this case also presents the risk that an uninformed jury will return a "compromise" verdict on a mistaken assumption about which of the two counts is more serious. Mr. Manzano was charged with a violation of both 18 U.S.C.

§ 2251(a) (production of child pornography), which carries a 15-year minimum, and 18 U.S.C. § 2252A(a)(1) (transporting or distributing child pornography), which carries a five-year minimum. It would hardly be obvious to a typical juror which is the more serious offense. Under the circumstances of this case, “production” could easily be understood as less serious, as it occurred in the context of a non-coerced relationship, while the transportation/distribution charge might be understood to entail further harm through dissemination to third parties (even though, in this case, no one except for government investigators ever saw the recording).

Although juries are discouraged from rendering compromise verdicts, the possibility of such outcomes are a well-accepted reality of criminal litigation. See, e.g., United States v. Mulder, 273 F.3d 91, 115 (2d Cir. 2001) (evidence of a compromise verdict not a basis for a new trial). For example, one party or the other will often seek, or oppose, a lesser-included offense instruction out of fear, or welcoming, of a compromise verdict. Without evidence explicating the sentencing consequences for each charge, the jury might well convict Mr. Manzano only of production, on the mistaken belief that this charge carried a lesser sentence. Warding off the risk of such error is yet another reason why the District Court’s openness to permitting evidence of the mandatory minimum is not only within its discretion, but eminently reasonable.

III. PROTECTING JURY INDEPENDENCE IS ALL THE MORE IMPORTANT GIVEN THE VANISHINGLY SMALL ROLE THAT JURY TRIALS PLAY IN OUR CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM.

Despite their intended centrality as the bedrock of our criminal justice system, jury trials are being pushed to the brink of extinction. Letting defendants inform the jury of the consequences of conviction and urge conscientious acquittal, in appropriate cases, would be a small but significant step toward rehabilitating the jury trial.

The proliferation of plea bargaining, which was completely unknown to the Founders, has transformed the country's robust "system of trials" into a "system of pleas." Lafler v. Cooper, 566 U.S. 156, 170 (2012). The Framers understood that "the jury right [may] be lost not only by gross denial, but by erosion." Jones v. United States, 526 U.S. 227, 248 (1999). That erosion is nearly complete, as plea bargains now comprise all but a tiny fraction of convictions. See Lafler, 566 U.S. at 170 (in 2012, pleas made up "[n]inety-seven percent of federal convictions and ninety-four percent of state convictions").

Most troubling, there is ample reason to believe that many criminal defendants—regardless of factual guilt—are effectively coerced into taking pleas, simply because the risk of going to trial is too great. See Jed S. Rakoff, Why Innocent People Plead Guilty, N.Y. REV. OF BOOKS, Nov. 20, 2014. In a recent report, the NACDL has extensively documented this "trial penalty"—that is, the "discrepancy between the sentence the prosecutor is willing to offer in exchange for a guilty plea and the sentence that would be imposed after a trial.” NAT’L ASS’N OF CRIM. DEF. LAWYERS, THE TRIAL PENALTY: THE SIXTH AMENDMENT RIGHT TO TRIAL ON THE VERGE OF EXTINCTION AND HOW TO SAVE IT 6 (2018).

Although the trial penalty has many complex causes, one of the biggest factors is the unbridled discretion of prosecutors to charge defendants in excess of what their alleged crimes actually warrant—especially when mandatory minimums remove the judge’s sentencing discretion entirely, as in the present case. See id. 7, 24–38. Given the pressure that prosecutors can bring to bear through charging decisions alone, many defendants decide to waive their right to a jury trial, no matter the merits of their case.

In short, we have traded the transparency, accountability, and legitimacy that arise from public jury trials for the efficiency of a plea-driven process that would have been unrecognizable and profoundly objectionable to the Founders. There is no panacea for this problem, but the least we can do to avoid further discouraging defendants from exercising their Sixth Amendment rights is to preserve the discretion of judges, in appropriate cases, to let the defense inform the jury of the consequences of a conviction and urge conscientious acquittal—especially when a case is so obviously overcharged, and severe mandatory minimums are at play.

CONCLUSION

Because the District Court's ruling is lawful and within its discretion, this Court should deny the government's petition.

Respectfully submitted,

DATED: December 19, 2018.

/s/ Jay R. Schweikert

Mary Price
FAMM FOUNDATION
1100 H Street, N.W.
Suite 1000
Washington, D.C. 20005
(202) 822-6700
mprice@famm.org

Peter Goldberger
50 Rittenhouse Place
Ardmore, PA 19003
peter.goldberger@verizon.net

Clark M. Neily III
Jay R. Schweikert
Counsel of Record
CATO INSTITUTE
1000 Mass. Ave., N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
(202) 216-1461
jschweikert@cato.org

Joel B. Rudin
Vice Chair, Amicus Curiae
Committee
NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF
CRIMINAL DEFENSE LAWYERS
152 West 57th Street, 8th Floor
New York, NY 10019
(212) 752-7600

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE

1. This brief complies with the type-volume limitation of Fed. R. App. P. 21(d)(1) & 29(a)(5) because it contains 3890 words, excluding the parts exempted by Fed. R. App. P. 32(f).
2. This brief complies with the typeface requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(5) and the type-style requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(6) because it has been prepared in a proportionally spaced typeface in Times New Roman, 14-point font.

/s/ Jay R. Schweikert
December 19, 2018

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that I electronically filed the foregoing with the Clerk of Court, who will enter it into the CM/ECF system, which will send a notification of such filing to the appropriate counsel.

/s/ Jay R. Schweikert
December 19, 2018